Journey with the author back to a much simpler time in our history then move forward to the present thinking of “Black Lives Matter” and the “MeToo Movement”. Because these topics are very much in the forefront of our country, Dr. Fuqua felt a need to chronicle her early life growing up on a former slave plantation near her hometown, Fort Valley, Georgia. We Were Innocent illustrates how naïve children are in regard to race relations. While she loved many of the Colored people who lived on her father's large farm and felt sorry for them, she went along with the adult's way of thinking that “this is just the way it is”. Moving away from Georgia was an eye opener regarding the race situation. Combining her metaphysical beliefs with her life experience with people of many races, she gives her viewpoint of the racial situation.

We Were Innocent also illustrates how a lack of sex education can affect children who have no real knowledge of sex, reproduction, etc. While parents mean well, they should understand how important some knowledge on this subject should be taught to children even at a young age.

While this book is quite different from Dr. Fuqua's earlier books, it is seen as quite timely for this conflicted period in our history.

Evelyn Fuqua holds a B.A. in Psychology from Agnes Scott College, an M.A. in counseling from California State University Sacramento and a Ph.D. in Psychology from the Professional School of Psychology. Fuqua is the author of From Sirius to Earth: A Therapist Discovers a Soul Exchange and You are Wonderful, a manual on self-esteem for children.
